NOMAD WINS MAJOR NEW CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT

Nomad Building Solutions Limited (Nomad) advises that its wholly owned subsidiary Nomad Modular Building, has been awarded a $10.6 million contract to design and manufacture a camp kitchen and dining buildings for the Fortescue Metals Group's (FMG) Solomon Iron Ore Project.

Work on kitchen and dining buildings will commence immediately and is scheduled to be completed and delivered to the Solomon Project in the north-west of Western Australia, by early December 2011.

Nomad's Managing Director Mr Michael Bourke said "the award of this contract is a significant achievement for the Company as it continues to position Nomad as a leading manufacturer of more complex central facilities for major projects in remote areas".

"Recent management changes and improved internal processes have strengthened the design, estimating, scheduling and project management capabilities of the business. These improvements made a significant contribution to the successful award of the FMG contract and leave Nomad Modular well positioned to win a significant share of this type of work in the future" he added.
